CONFERENCE CONCEPT

In today's challenging period, all regions need to step up support for research and innovation in order to ensure, in a global competitive environment, the sustainable development of science and technology necessary for the upturn and growth of everybody's economy.

Synergy between research and innovation results not only in societal and economic impact but also, and very importantly, in the creation of enhanced opportunities for further developments.

We have to create the world in such a way that people learn to work together, collaboration and competition is encouraged and all the big projects are managed by the common goal of society and environment.

Fundamental science is essential for a coherent approach to the challenges of a sustainable and inclusive recovery, the resilience of global supply chains, and the competitiveness of our economies.

The conference is going to initiate a discussion to explore the connections between the sciences, the relationship between science and society, the social responsibility of science and its contribution to energy, medicine, health, climate action, education, and sustainable development.
